I feel like this is something Black twitter is always having to explain over and over again, whether it is anti-Asian or anti-Latinx sentiment. Gentrification comes with a ton of resentment, oppression comes with resentment. This is why bell hooks said theory can be liberating.

Good thread. Tldr- Without a solid theory of class and race-as-class (vs race as biology), resentment turns from liberatory motivation for structural change to racial resentment locked into Enlightenment ontology.

Alex Rubinstein @RealAlexRubi

Apparent rise of anti-Semitism in NY from some POC is attributable to cultural sensitivities forbidding communities of color from giving air to gripes over the class domination some Jews have on them. Forced into shadows, the class resentment mutates & devolves into racial hatred

Ah, no. I think it was handled by the leftists best positioned to see it through in a way that was callous and anti-Black, but that doesn't make it okay for fascists to doxx someone. I also find the concept of white abuser anonymity jarring for other theoretical reasons, but no.

Shortly after he accused my [brown, Muslim] friend of being "exactly like Stormfront" because he said it is not racist to say, "The absolute state of white men on the left."

This whole trying to tie me to LuL thing started because I called him racist and this is his retaliation.

He once told me I was playing the race card when I said that living under the everyday terror of white supremacy makes conversations about race hard to have with white people, for whom it is abstracted.

Then said I was "exactly like Candace Owens" (gee, wonder which way).

Agreed, I wouldn't either. I'm assuming Ngo got that doxx from either Erik Striker's article the day before or when it went out earlier (I sent it to said doxxed person in March(?) when I saw it for the first time). If it came from LuL as I've said, the whole org should be razed.

We show how much we've internalized carcerality when we fear justice so deeply that we think accountability is a bad thing.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · Jan 6

Why is speaking out about abuse considered "rocking the boat" of leftist organizing? Because we have internalized a carceral mindset.

"So you're just going to ruin this person's life?"

"You're cancelling them after all they've done?"

"They don't deserve this."

First, carcerality. I have heard this story a million times over in different forms.

Survivors fear speaking out about abuse will be seen as "divisive." Political transformation is not a horizon we neednt embody today, and cant occur without the work of personal transformation.

I remain caught on the horns of the same old dilemma. The one I've been stuck in since I was with her. What to do with the fact that this fairly high profile career activist, who does do good work often, is really abusive at home. That she mangled me and my self-concept so badly cannot be irrelevant, but I still feel as though it reflects poorly on me and as though I ought not rock the lefty labour boat by talking about it.

Escalation isn't a one-time event. Things can continually escalate, and intervention or deescalation can happen at many points in that process. Do you wrongly believe Esmail Qaan is going to be kind to Syrians or something?

This is the absurdity of AT/ MdP/ et al. arguing "the mainstream is in favor of social justice." Our options are the RW which is /for/ whites, and the LW dominated by whites who abuse the Black people, poc, and women around them. Power is also about control over representation.

This is why the left will lose. We are watching a famous leftist dodge abuse allegations by demanding accountability from someone else.

The accuser is being railroaded by right wingers, from Nazbols calling him "it" to Andy Ngo cynically weaponizing his hurt.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial

If you're not willing to hold yourself accountable, nobody is going to entertain you trying to hold them accountable. If the left can't solve the crisis of governance through a pathway for shared accountability, we /will/ lose.

color that I attended several years ago. I sat in the audience, excited that one of my heros was about to speak. I then watched as she, a veteran queer Chicana leader yelled, in public and abusively, at a young Native American female assistant who was simply trying to set up her microphone. We then listened to her justify, to a room of 3,000 women of color, her behavior with the fact of her status in the movement. Needless to say, I was saddened. I was deeply saddened with her choice to become THE pattern for our interactions with others.

It is my hope that we choose to heal and to do things in ways that foment healthier communities, rather than broken ones.

It is my hope that as leaders we become models of healing.

"When I brush my daughter's hair and elaborately braid it round the side of her scalp, I am doing the thing that is expected of me. When my husband brushes out tangles before bedtime, he needs his efforts noticed and congratulated—saying aloud in front of both me and her that it took him a whole 15 minutes. There are many small examples of where the work I normally do must be lauded when transferred to my husband. It seems like a small annoyance, but its significance looms larger. My son will boast of his clean room and any other jobs he has done; my daughter will quietly put her clothes in the hamper and get dressed each day without being asked. They are six and four respectively. Unless I engage in this conversation on emotional labor and actively change the roles we inhabit, our children will do the same. They are already following in our footsteps; we are leading them toward the same imbalance."

Addressing anger and pain is addressing and preventing violence

Humans of New York

December 17 at 1:26 PM · 🌐

"It was a woman. I don't even remember her name. But sometimes she'd take me out of my third grade class, and we'd go to her office, and just play with play-doh, or dried beans. I don't even remember what we talked about. But she helped me find ways to control my anger: stop cussing in class, stop doing off the wall things, stuff like that. I think it was the first time someone ever really tried to help me. When I was a baby, my father got murdered. And sometimes you can't really talk to your family about nothing. Because there are these sensitive spots and dark places, and maybe they're hurting too. So people just hold onto stuff. Especially in this neighborhood. Especially males. They walk around with pain on them because it charges them up. They need it so they can have an excuse to lash out and do whatever they want. And I guess some people win on it. But at the end of the day, I'd rather win on being positive. I don't mind saying how I feel. And I'm not a therapist, but I try to let people around me know that I don't mind if they share

This is why we struggled to articulate the urgent need for leftism in the Obama years. Progressives didnt see that as fascism, they saw it as good governance- and how could immigrant worker camps or mass incarceration rage on in such a sweet little democracy? Things were "fine".

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 18 Dec 2019

I point this out for a reason, not just to correct for the sake of it. If we think all the bad things are fascism, then we only react to fascism and enter this reactionary loop. It leads us to believe, say, liberalism is inherently antifascist in spite of its causal relationship.

It's good to argue over what fascism is, because looking at fascism (a culture) vs fascism (a revolution) vs fascism (a mode of governance) requires us to operationalize different definitions for different contexts-- but they have to be justified, grounded in reality, and useful.

This compulsive need to redefine every historical atrocity as an instance of fascism, which has a wealth of definitions but none of them this meaningless, hollows out yet another word useful in specificity but not as a general slur, making its meaning mere moral valence: Bad.

If I don't believe you are a human being, a person, with inherent value and innate dignity, I am a fascist. I believe therefore that I'm superior to you, and the rest, slavery, genocide, the impossibility of democracy, etc follows. It's much simpler than it's made out to be.

labor unions.

Just so does the white community, as a means of keeping itself white, elect, as they imagine, their political (!) representatives. No nation in the world, including England, is represented by so stunning a pantheon of the relentlessly mediocre. I will not name names—I will leave that to you.

But this cowardice, this necessity of justifying a totally false identity and of justifying what must be called a genocidal history, has placed everyone now living into the hands of the most ignorant and powerful people the world has ever seen. And how did they get that way? By deciding that they were white. By opting for safety instead of life. By persuading themselves that a black child's life meant nothing compared with a white child's life. By abandoning their children to the things white men could buy. By informing their children that black women, black men, and black children had no human integrity that those who call themselves white were bound to respect. And in this debasement and definition of black people, they debased and defined themselves.

And have brought humanity to the edge of oblivion: because they think they are white. Because they think they are white, they do not dare confront the ravage and the lie of their history. Because they think they are white, they cannot allow themselves to be tormented by the suspicion that all men are brothers. Because they think they are white, they are looking for, or bombing into existence, stable population, cheerful natives, and cheap labor. Because they think they are white, they believe, as even no child believes, in the dream of safety. Because they think they are white, however vociferous they may be and however multitudinous, they are as speechless as Lot's wife—looking backward, changed into a pillar of salt.

What does "real" mean? Was race "real" during slavery, considering it was the basis for material harm?

All of our analysis of identity should be grounded in materialism, otherwise it's not good analysis. Identity matters insofar as it is constructed and deployed materially.

And to add, Modernity is a repetition of what came before it. To that other person's point, at other times (and in other ways, even today) modern-day Europeans have been enslaved. Modernity was an iteration with a new spin, not something that sprung out of nowhere.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 6 Dec 2019

Replying to @ModernM51677586

If these identities are tied to modernity, we should expect them to change as modernity changes. Whether or not that is for the better or worse depends on whether we can politically organize into communities that refuse to dominate each other, otherwise history repeats.

Reminder that we live in WISCONSIN. Temps have already dipped into the teens some days.

I've been to a lot of committees across state, county, city, local, and district governments and this is the most stonewalling I've ever seen.

I asked if they thought the lack of transparency was an issue, was told, "The purpose of the committee is not to answer that question" 🙄

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 5 Dec 2019

The committee says they only make recommendations on individual cases, but quickly reverses that after being pressed. They say they make general recommendations, but still refuse to make those public because they are made /on/ individual cases. Convenient!

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 5 Dec 2019

The committee begins by refusing to answer what recommendations they have offered in the last year. They say they aren't here to criticize the prisons but to give oversight on individual cases.

That's not enough! You'll understand why when you hear the testimonies:

I would like to add one thing! When I say "identity is constructed," I don't mean that it doesn't exist outside politics... I mean that even a "naturally occurring" identity still has to be taken up (politicized) into the formation of the nation and ourselves as we exist and check back against the owning class' lies and propaganda. It's analysis worth doing.

This is more than just a way to explain and manage the anxiety of a future where the terrain of our communities looks totally different (ex: white genocide via the destruction of white culture rather than biological death), though the world could certainly use a big dose of that!

Show this thread

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

Idpol must balance: First, that identity (constructed or otherwise) is real, important to us, and often defines or constrains our options in life and exposes or protects us from violence; second, identities must necessarily be created/destroyed as we change society for the better

Show this thread

This is particularly true in a globalized economy dominated by extremely mobile capital and increasingly immobilized laborers, particularly as immigration crackdowns increase. None of the root causes of mass, forced immigration or citizen-worker exploitation ever go addressed.

Show this thread

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

It's a bait-and-switch: 1. Slam billionaires, 2. Slam immigrants, 3. Assert both are the enemies of the American worker, 4. Scapegoat immigrants, keep the overall structural integrity of capitalism the same. If wages go up even a little, it works fine.

...encourage the working class/poor to understand our identity (politically!) primarily as national subjects. This encourages the political/economic framework (American vs foreign/immigrant workers) the owning class relies on to continue exploiting labor and promoting patriotism.

Anti-idpol lefties, by constantly affirming the reasonability of citizenship-based idpol in contrast to the unreasonable, divisive critiques that examine citizenship at the intersections of race, gender, class, etc (ex: men denied asylum for not being "sympathetic victims")...

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

Nationalism benefits the owning class in a million ways: easily exploitable workers (both doc and undocumented immigrants lack labor rights enjoyed by citizens), it instills patriotism critical to securing the US arms industry which makes up 1/3 of our manufacturing economy, etc.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

Of course, the owning class IS responsible for reactionary nationalism- they proliferate it in the media (ex: Tucker, who actually earns praise from the anti-idpol left for pulling the wool over the eyes of the working class!), in curriculum (West is Best), etc to their benefit.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

Take, for example, an idea frequently vocalized by the anti-idpol crowd: nationality is too normalized an identity for most people, and so the reactionary nationalism of working class Americans is reasonable and expected- they argue we should point our ire at the owning class.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

If we decline to engage in identity politics, we take for granted the way identity is constructed. We can't see beyond them to the radical potential of other ways of organizing ourselves, other ways of knowing us as "us" and others as foreign. This only benefits the owning class.

When we fail to provide an analysis of identity because we reject the particular weaponization of idpol by neoliberalism, we fall back (politically!) on the identities we take for granted-- the ones constituted by power so strong we stopped noticing it: American, worker, white.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

You may ask: What difference does it ultimately make? What good does it do the poor and working class to be lectured about how power shapes the boundaries of the identities we hold dear. They are important to us! We deserve to experience comfort and pride in who we are. Well.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

Anti-idpol logic treats as a diversion analysis of how power creates, maintains, and normalizes identity. Identity is normalized when we don't even notice it's ongoing production (ex: capitalists asserting a poor underclass is normal/inevitable). Evil is banal, banality is evil.

1 1 10

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

You can argue that the construction of an identity is good (ex: capitalists arguing that the working class identity is a natural one emerging from the natural economic state ideal to human civilization), but the most imp political identities /are/ created and maintained by power.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 4 Dec 2019

When identities are externally constituted, it is often through violence-- think slave, illegal immigrant, poor, working class-- these are all identities constituted by a relationship to violence, power, and resources... through their capacity for exploitation, one might say.

Identities can be our own indiv invention, but they are most powerfully constituted through relationships-- a shared experience-- that helps us know ourselves as ourselves and as separate from others.

people will be like oh no death threats but in reality its more like do you want to live or are you too afraid to die?

"revolutionary suicide does not mean that i and my comrades have a death wish; it means just the opposite. we have such a strong desire to live with hope and human dignity that existence without them is impossible. when reactionary forces crush us, we must move against these forces, even at the risk of death."

The importance of this stuff really can't be overstated. We like to think that we can't be tricked like the right has been, or that we can tell when it's propaganda, or we are too rational to fall for it.... we are wrong. We are all human and are all being exploited this way.

It's not an accusation, it's a fact and not a surprising one because racism is inescapable for white people and it is not productive to try to pretend otherwise. It's critical to understand this if you are going to effectively fight oppression.

It is 1000% constructive for us to point out how white men continue to act racist and deride poc in spaces that are allegedly against white supremacy. We need to name it, and we need to be able to name it, especially when their name is thrown out as an expert.

So is it some grug brained thing people whine about, as you both earlier claimed, or is it a specific mode of governance?

Well, I take that back. You can find plenty of use for ideographic definitions if you're a demagogue. :)

Antifa and conservatives both have this grug brained mindset where fascism = authoritarianism

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 26 Nov 2019

Replying to @arnelsmom

Whether your argument is now "Every regulation in lib democracies is not the will of the nation" or "Every national action towards corporations in fascist governments is the will of the nation," both are equally ridiculous and outside of your definition's capacity to delineate.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 26 Nov 2019

Replying to @arnelsmom @SiegeTheDay123

Your people are going to like your comments because that's what friends do, but honestly, this is a sad showing of projection (who are these strawmen for?) and vague conceptualizations (does any nationstate not, in some way, bend corporations to the will of the nation?).

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 26 Nov 2019

Hartman asks you:

"Can you imagine a place for wayward colored girls?"

What did they know of Truth and Tubman? Or the contours of black women's war against the state and capital? Could they ever understand the dreams of another world which didn't trouble the distinction between man, settler, and master? Or recounted the struggle against servitude, captivity, property, and enclosure that began in the barracoon and continued on the ship, where some fought, some jumped, some refused to eat. Others set the plantation and the fields on fire, poisoned the master. They had never listened to Lucy Parsons; they had never read Ida B. Wells. Or envisioned the riot as a rally cry and refusal of fungible life? Only a misreading of the key texts of anarchism could ever imagine a place for wayward colored girls.

I live to forget

Rage and forgetting
Rage and forgetting
Rage and forgetting

Queers have no time to hold grudges and revisit past wounds

We know there can never be justice in a world build to exploit and destroy us

We rage, we forget, and so we allow ourselves to live

Lenin and Marx have never fucked the ways we have.

We need something a bit more thorough - something equipped to come with teeth-gnashing to all the intricacies of our misery. Simply put, we want to make ruins of domination in all of its varied and interlacing forms. This struggle inhabiting every social relationship is what we know as social war. It is both the process and the condition of a conflict with this totality.

IV

In the discourse of queer, we are talking about a space of struggle against this totality - against normalcy. By "queer", we mean "social war"

You have to differentiate "real" versus "fake" sometim, because Wilson is using "anarchist" as a deliberate rhetorical ploy to conflate academic accelerationism with a different kind that does not originate with Land for the purpose of associating them under a chaotic umbrella.

Strong agree. Adolph Reed Jr explains this best- there's no such thing as a right wing (ie, US libertarian) anarchist because it devolves into either total unaccountability or the state as violent protector of personal property rights (even if it reconfigures what property is)

Idk, maybe my experience with them has been uniquely bad, but when they were contacting organizers of color and saying "We are too white and it's bad optics, we need poc, please join us" but didn't want to change any of what they had planned... it gave me a bad feeling.

Hunger strikes work because of the threat of death. If you take all these measures (including an end point well before most typically-well-fed people would succumb)..... then it's not really a hunger strike, it's a politically-tinted detox.

SOCIAL MEDIA ACTIVITIES AND PLOT SUCCESS

Among extremists who were involved in domestic terror plots, actively using social media platforms to communicate with other extremists in order to facilitate attacks was negatively associated with plot success.

- Only 10% of individuals who used social media to plan, finance, or conduct domestic terror attacks successfully carried out their plots.
- Inversely, individuals who used social media platforms for more passive uses during their radicalization or mobilization processes (i.e., consuming content, sharing content, participating in extremist dialogue, creating content, and communicating with other extremists for ideological knowledge), were significantly more likely to achieve plot success (33.67%).
- However, the data show that the most successful extremists in terms of plot progression abstained from using social media altogether. Indeed, individuals who were not present on social media had the highest rate of successful plots at nearly 36% (Figure 7).

le, it wasn't desegregation in reality, it was just the aesthetic of desegregation without changing any of the material structures that caused segregation in the first place. Policy solutions that don't shift the balance of power just wind up producing more violence.

It's not a retreat into mono-ethnic schools to say that Black children deserve Black teachers and schools that empower them, or that the military forcing physical desegregation just exposed Black kids and other kids of color to racist white spaces that were incredibly toxic.

We need to get out of their way and give them a/the/their future.

School changed utterly with racial integration. Gone was the messianic zeal to transform our minds and beings that had characterized teachers and their pedagogical practices in our all-black schools. Knowledge was suddenly about information only. It had no relation to how one lived, behaved. It was no longer connected to antiracist struggle. Bussed to white schools, we soon learned that obedience, and not a zealous will to learn, was what was expected of us. Too much eagerness to learn could easily be seen as a threat to white authority.

When we entered racist, desegregated, white schools we left a world where teachers believed that to educate black children rightly would require a political commitment. Now, we were mainly taught by white teachers whose lessons reinforced racist stereotypes. For black children, education was no longer about the practice of freedom. Realizing this, I lost my love of school.

I'm not talking about the part where they algorithmically simulate what is, in theory, possible. They don't ultimately recommend that because it has to be uniformly instituted in a way that is not realistic nor desirable because of the high level of power it grants the state!

Replying to @notcolloquial @scottkernest

Your idea that we should chase a goal like getting countries that will not comply to ban a random 10% of what we (who exactly?) determine to be hate is such a ridiculous solution that it belies the true goal to get white people off the hook for the hard work of solidarity.

an evacuation zone as her employer fled. She was trapped by the roadblocks and mudslides for about a week. To survive, she shared food and water with a group of day laborers at a home next door who were similarly stranded. When the evacuation orders were lifted, she told her employer that she was leaving, and he asked her to grab a few items from the house.

Working class solidarity means we defend immigrant workers from the cruelty of the ruling class.

Column: Why did no one warn the housekeepers about the Getty fire?

Housekeepers in the Pacific Palisades were unaware of the mandatory evacuations and showed up to work while a threatening fire blazed.

"Naming the thing is as bad as the thing itself" makes sense in Molyneux's world because it is the land of power where talking about a war for long enough will help ensure it happens.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 30 Oct 2019

And so Molyneux can use this to equate real and figurative wars: class war = the war on Christmas = the war on billionaires = the war on freedom. The distance between metaphor and real life collapses, because reality stops having material anchors.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 30 Oct 2019

The alt right realized what conservatives have to remain ignorant to if they are to remain conservatives, which is that the media has helped the powerful manufacture wars both military and cultural. Molyneux pretends to not understand this when it benefits him.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 30 Oct 2019

The Gulf War Never Happened (TM) fits really neatly with other wars that also never happened, like the War on Christmas or War on Men, but of course these wars were real in that they have been destructive self-fulfilling prophecies.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 30 Oct 2019

This is obviously a really silly, incoherent idea, but the comments will inevitably reveal so much about how the conservative movement incidentally did a lot to create really specific and destructive notions of precarity which then spawned the alt-right.

That's not what the court did

I'd advise you to not take Walsh's interpretation of any court findings, especially these, at face value.

Idk, this guy seems to have his head on straight, let's ask him for more details about what he means here.

Did you know?

Trans adults are born as adults. We were never ever children.

Matt Walsh @MattWalshBlog

If the courts said that my son has to be chemically castrated, I would go to literally any means to prevent it. The authority of judges and lawmakers is not absolute. When they come for our children, they step beyond the bounds of their authority. A man then has to act on his own

Dr. Mansa Keita @rasmansa

Race science isn't inherently bad. The study of the possible existence of biological race is a perfectly fine scientific enterprise.

Scientific racism is the skipping of first establishing biological race...

Y'ALL

Today is two years to the day of this cease and desist letter from the Proud Boys.

Happy Anniversary!

(And oh, do I have a followup story for y'all for tomorrow.)

You are directed to cease and desist making any publications concerning The Proud Boys. You are further directed to immediately retract the article referenced in this letter and to refrain from republishing the same. Failure to do so may result in legal action against you by individual members of the fraternity or the fraternity as a whole.

Very truly yours,

Maybe I'll defend that more later, bc I don't think it's self-evident, but it's the difference between Hitler being pushed harder and harder by the organized fascists who put him in power vs Manson crafting a world he could rule and then dominating it. AWD is Ma[n]sony like that.

le, sure they may idealize Manson and Hitler, but the two had competing notions of what arrangement sustained white life- the nation/volk or the family. It seems like a pedantic distinction (isn't the volk argued to be a family?) but it's core to understanding their tactics.

One thing not captured in court documents is AWD's conception of whiteness (a la Siege) is rooted in a familial model of racial kinship so tight-knit it goes beyond traditional ideas of white kinship, becoming so insular one [redacted] told me, "Dead white kids are great optics."

Kaleb Cole is a self-admitted member of the Atomwaffen Division and believed to be the cell leader of the Washington State chapter. The Atomwaffen Division, as noted by open source articles, is a neo-Nazi group known for its recruiting of young white men attracted to a violent ideology that idolizes Adolf Hitler and Charles Manson (see attached open source articles). This group believes that a race war is coming and similar to Charles Manson's theory of "Helter Skelter" the Atomwaffen Division, according to the Anti-defamation League, articulates a white supremacist ideology rooted in "accelerationist beliefs." ¹ Accelerationist beliefs are fueled by the perception that the future of the white race is bleak, and they must employ any means necessary to expedite the collapse of current system. Accelerationists believe that setting off a series of reactions, even if they result in changes that directly threaten the white race, can actually be a useful tool for motivating more reticent white supremacists. Following an extremist terrorist attack such as the Tree of Life or the Christchurch mass shootings, accelerationists identify a domino effect that is set into motion—a chain of societal reactions that further

csun.edu/~hfspc002/442/...

A little appearance of their example in unexpected translation has called forth far too many vandalistic comments. There are other ways of burning books than on the pyre—and the favorite method of the hasty reviewer is to deprive himself and his readers by inattention. I maintain that it is thoroughly vandalistic for the reviewer to content himself with the mere inflicting of a few symbolic wounds upon this book and its author, of an intensity varying with the resources of the reviewer and the time at his disposal. Hitler's "Battle" is exasperating, even nauseating; yet the fact remains: If the reviewer but knocks off a few adverse attitudes and calls it a day, with a guaranty in advance that his article will have a favorable reception among the decent members of our population, he is contributing more to our gratification than to our enlightenment.

Here is the testament of a man who swung a great people into his wake. Let us watch it carefully; and let us watch it, not merely to discover some grounds for prophesying what political move is to follow Munich, and what move to follow that move, etc.; let us try also to discover what kind of "medicine" this medicine-man has concocted, that we may know, with greater accuracy, exactly what to guard against, if we are to forestall the concocting of

It's good and bad.

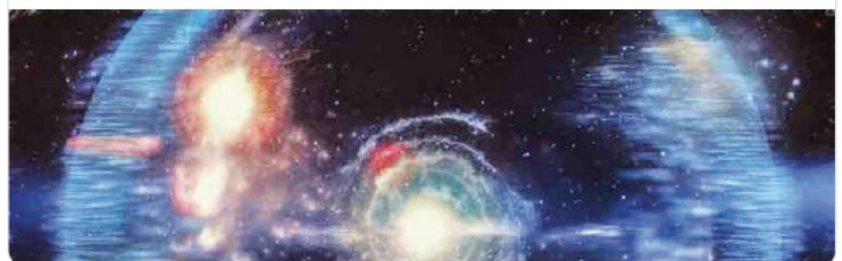

The good: a lot of angry dudes ready to fuck up the status quo become ideological free agents, liberated from the need to defend a group they seem to know, deep down, is bullshit

The bad: The real violent ones are drawing a lot closer.

Some called it the "Night of the Long Knives." Some said "RIP Proud Boys." I call it the Big Bang.

Getting kicked from FB has sent us in all different directions. We no longer have such a concentrated, centralized hub for communication. But we are expanding and growing in ways we weren't before. State and local chapters are finding new channels of communication. We're focusing more on local efforts. And we all still know how to find each other.

The Proud Boy foundation before the Big Bang was strong. And now the Proud Boys are expanding and getting stronger. I'll see you all at a West Fest 2019, the biggest West Fest yet. POYB

The history of the Milwaukee Socialist Party- its successes and imperfections (early officials in particular didn't do jack about racial discrimination)- is one of the many things I love so much about Wisconsin. Socialism works! Read the history for yourself, and don't be conned!

They didn't regulate. They pushed a complete program of public goods that improved the average person's life: public parks, libraries, schools, health, works, port facilities, housing, vocational education, and natatoria. They did it with penny-pinching financial sustainability!

Wisconsin Socialists developed the lakefront, creating beautiful public spaces still enjoyed today. They earned the name "Sewer Socialists" for their amazing public sanitation program that "wouldn't poison people" (a big deal at the time!).

Milwaukee had been plagued by corruption, and the SP was the perfect antidote, fighting for honest and transparent governance. @TIME declared Milwaukee "perhaps the best-governed city in the U.S." and they soon racked up a host of governance awards for their municipal programs.

In 1918, Berger once again won his seat. But this time, Congress refused to allow him to serve in his democratically-elected office, alleging he had violated the federal Espionage Act by opposing WWI. SCOTUS reversed this decision in 1921, and Berger was re-elected in 1922.

Milwaukee's first SP mayor, Emil Seidel, was a passionate anti-war activist. He saw war's economic devastation; the working class paid the price in the deterioration of public infrastructure. He also opposed entry into WWI because it undermined international worker solidarity.

Don't trust media outlets who never make an effort to contact the people they are talking about. Good journalism allows the subject matter to speak for themselves.

Look for:

-Original quotes

-First hand accounts

-"X did not respond to our repeated request for comment."

Most are reasonable. That's why they don't platform us-- it would undermine the "hysterical leftist" narrative they have going on.

Why do you think they always accuse the left of doing the same thing?

Misdirection is a classic political technique.

I was being a bit artistic about the details -- his aunt gave him the book, not his grandma, but otherwise yes, that is a very real comment. But there's so much more here! The comments are a roast, too.

In Depth

I took my girlfriend to see Jordan Peterson

It did not go as well as I hoped. Let me give you a bit of a back story. I am using a throwaway because my girlfriend knows my main Reddit.

I found out about Jordan Peterson about a year ago and since then I became a huge fan. I was never a big reader, but I got all of his books. (They are the only books on my bookshelf and also a book about John F. Kennedy my aunt gave me but I never read. So I don't have many books and its a small shelf.)

uncomfortable, it will be painful for us to look back at decisions and acknowledge our own participation in the mistake. We will face substantial cognitive dissonance between our view of ourselves as good people with good judgment and an assessment of our past actions that acknowledges the mistakes. Demagoguery helps resolve that cognitive dissonance by telling us that we can stop questioning ourselves and our judgment—we didn't do anything wrong; we were absolutely right in our decisions. So you can blame the backlash to power's unrelenting grasp on politics, or you can blame that power directly and diagnose this situation correctly. This person is reacting to a phenomenon that mass resistance is meant to counter, and we will continue to do so. Will you join us?

The left's response-- screaming politicians down in restaurants and whatnot-- is frankly restrained as hell relative to the incredible hubris of the government in passing only the laws the wealthiest donors want. We didn't kill deliberation, but we will now pay the price anyway.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 24 Oct 2018

The breakdown in deliberation likely IS related to these attempts, but that breakdown was caused by the unresponsiveness of elected officials and the outright hysteria the right has been using, foreclosing the very possibility of deliberation, to win elections from 9/11 onwards.

vanityfair.com/hollywood/2018...

Robert Greene's new documentary, Bisbee '17, has arrived just in time.

It's a film occasioned by the centennial of a grave moment in American labor history: a mining strike that resulted in a massive miscarriage of justice. On July 12, 1917, about 1,300 striking miners and their supporters—local citizens and members of the Industrial Workers of the World (I.W.W.) activist union—were rounded up by a gang of some 2,000

Further, with Thinking (T) as one of their governing traits, INTPs are unlikely to understand emotional complaints at all, and their friends won't find a bedrock of emotional support in them. People with the INTP personality type would much rather make a series of logical suggestions for how to resolve the underlying issue, a perspective that is not always welcomed by their Feeling (F) companions. This will likely extend to most social conventions and goals as well, like planning dinners and getting married, as INTPs are far more concerned with originality and efficient results.

The one thing that really holds INTPs back is their restless and pervasive fear of failure. INTP personalities are so prone to reassessing their own thoughts and theories, worrying that they've missed some critical piece of the puzzle, that they can stagnate, lost in an intangible world where their thoughts are never truly applied. Overcoming this self-doubt stands as the greatest challenge INTPs are likely to face, but the intellectual gifts – big and small – bestowed on the world when they do makes it worth the fight.

So when Cernovich, who is reeling from his friendship w/ Proud Boys' founder Gavin McInnes, tells you that this group is no big deal-- just some "randos" no one has ever heard of-- don't trust his assessment! He is downplaying the threat to save himself.

Mike Cernovich @Cernovich

No one had heard of this person, but NBC can use him to attack the GOP, and thus the media will make him famous.

I've avoided looking too deeply at Cernovich to focus on these so-called "randos that nobody has ever heard of," but I'm exceptionally tired of hearing this line from people who know better. I can't imagine, even from my limited engagement, that Cernovich still doesn't get this.

Regardless of your analysis of the veracity of her claim, her assertion was that DNA analysis is sufficient to establish ancestry. That claim, independent of what those tests showed, is incorrect.

forecast, had anticipated this, as the rock upon which the old Union would split. He was right. What was conjecture with him, is now a realized fact. But whether he fully comprehended the great truth upon which that rock stood and stands, may be doubted. The prevailing ideas entertained by him and most of the leading statesmen at the time of the formation of the old constitution, were that the enslavement of the African was in violation of the laws of nature; that it was wrong in principle, socially, morally, and politically. It was an evil they knew not well how to deal with, but the general opinion of the men of that day was that, somehow or other in the order of Providence, the institution would be evanescent and pass away. This idea, though not incorporated in the constitution, was the prevailing idea at that time. The constitution, it is true, secured every essential guarantee to the institution while it should last, and hence no argument can be justly urged against the constitutional guarantees thus secured, because of the common sentiment of the day. Those ideas, however, were fundamentally wrong. They rested upon the assumption of the equality of races. This was an error. It was a sandy foundation, and the government built upon it fell when the "storm came and the wind blew."

The people of Georgia having dissolved their political connection with the Government of the United States of America, present to their confederates and the world the causes which have led to the separation. For the last ten years we have had numerous and serious causes of complaint against our non-slave-holding confederate States with reference to the subject of African slavery. They have endeavored to weaken our security, to disturb our domestic peace and tranquility, and persistently refused to comply with their express constitutional obligations to us in reference to that property, and by the use of their power in the Federal Government have striven to deprive us of an equal enjoyment of the common Territories of the Republic. This hostile policy of our confederates has been pursued with every circumstance of aggravation which could arouse the passions and excite the hatred of our people, and has placed the two sections of the Union for many years past in the condition of virtual civil war. Our people, still attached to the Union from habit and national traditions, and averse to change, hoped that time, reason, and argument would bring, if not redress, at least exemption from further insults, injuries, and dangers. Recent events have fully dissipated all such hopes and demonstrated the necessity of separation.

In Gavin's book, The Death of Cool, he talks about how West is another way to say "white." But the resistance you feel here is legit. It's because he means "white" as a CULTURE, not a biological race. He is about the promotion of a certain kind of political subjectivity.

When I show those transcripts to Proud Boys, they back off and promise to think about what they are hearing. We've never taken the topic back up though. I wish they would. Most of these guys in random chapters away from McInnes' wealth are angry working class dudes.

This mentality of war is consuming the young men-- most of whom are likeable dudes if you get them away from the drama of "the battle"-- and in my opinion is one of the larger threats to building a base against our collective oppressors. They get lost to the mythos.

Show this threadMing the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 13 Oct 2018

And those that don't, who find themselves in anti-fascist strongholds like Portland, rapidly find their way to the mentality of war. Take Rufio Panman (Ethan Nordean). He gave an interview with Infowar's Alex Jones, where this exchange happens:

Jones: What is the profile of the average antifa? I kinda see the young meth head type, but then I kinda see the professor type in the background directing them

Panman: "Yeah. Well I always say it seems like they all kind of came from the same inbred family, you know. They just come out of these holes, you don't really know where they come from. I'm sure they congregate from somewhere. But uh, yeah, they're all these Sméagol looking people—or they're women—so you know, they have the women on the front line, and then they have these sketchy looking cockroaches, you know, kind of wandering in the back with weapons And there's nobody really prominent in their stature there and it's very odd, to say the least.

Jones: If you had to define them, it's weakness and dishonor and what you don't want to be. It's like "Wow, they don't even know that they are the literal stench of cowardice"

Panman: Yeah. Yeah. They're what I would embody is just this demonically possessed meat suits of human beings. They aren't anything prominent, they don't have anything to show as a public figure.

Jones: They're the enemy.

Panman: They're the enemy.

3. The more that narrative becomes internalized, the more violence inevitably spills out. Now, some chapters have "No LARPing" rules (LARP = Live Action Role Play, basically no going out and brawling over politics). But most don't.

In the time since I wrote those articles, I've spent a lot of time talking to and being around Proud Boys. I have a forthcoming research article, but I want to talk about some of the more important points:

Why did it take so long for people to start taking notice? Well, for one, the Proud Boys have had a standing order for their attorney, Jason Lee Van Dyke, to threaten to sue anyone who called them alt right or white supremacist, like the letter he sent me-

It was nearly a year ago today that I first started writing about how the Proud Boys were a white supremacist (yes, even with men of color!) organization trending towards violence, so yesterday's events seem about on cue.

Whiteness uses bodies to sustain itself, even "white" ones. But the PBoC are in a Kanye situation-- they aren't just pawns of whiteness, they actively desire the freedom to be droves of carefree, winner-takes-all white men. The right to stomp others out in a lot of cases.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 13 Oct 2018Replying to @notcolloquial @EmilyGorcenski

But they do always say they were provoked, but the mere presence of antifa is provocation to them. People carrying a flag or wearing a sweater have been occasions to jump people. Including here in WI.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 13 Oct 2018Replying to @EmilyGorcenski

I've been writing about them for a little over a year now, and have been asking how to get people to care about how many alienated men are being pulled in. One thing that seems especially relevant here is that in all the fights I can think of, they open violence in almost all.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 13 Oct 2018Replying to @EmilyGorcenski

Perhaps I was confused by the actor of the sentence. It sounds like you meant the Proud Boys (active) parades these men of color (passive pawns) around, vs they themselves enjoy being at the front line and the attention they get for being special and useful.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 13 Oct 2018Replying to @notcolloquial @EmilyGorcenski

It's less of an accident that men of color join than it is a statement about the deep bonds of misogyny and old school xenophobia towards unassimilated immigrants and Islam.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 13 Oct 2018Replying to @EmilyGorcenski

This strikes me as extremely paternalistic, as though those men have no agency and aren't conscious actors. I hear often how frustrated they are that white journalists skip past them because they break a narrative, like they are just a footnote to be tossed aside.

We developed a taxonomy for understanding how procedures to change implicit measures differed. Using this taxonomy, we found that procedures that directly or indirectly targeted associations, depleted mental resources, or induced goals all changed implicit measures relative to neutral procedures. In contrast, procedures that induced threat, affirmation, or affective states had small and/or inconsistent effects. These results support the theoretical portrayal of automatically retrieved associations as sensitive to pairings of information in the social environment (Gawronski & Bodenhausen, 2006). These results also support the importance of goal-directed motivation and cognitive resources in changing the expression of automatically retrieved associations (Fazio & Olson, 2014; Gawronski & Payne, 2010; Devine, 1989).

In the discussion, the authors note a few things of interest-- directly breaking down the associations between race and the qualities associated with those races produces the strongest effect. And that people who identify as "white" are much more stubborn about their racism.

The specific differences for the significant moderators are shown in Figure 3. Procedures that induce goals to weaken bias drove most of the moderator differences. These procedures produced stronger effect sizes in non-student samples ($g_{\text{non-student}} = -.44$, $g_{\text{student}} = -.24$), samples with proportionally fewer White people ($g_{60\% \text{ White}} = -.31$, $g_{100\% \text{ White}} = -.07$), studies that used an IAT ($g_{\text{IAT}} = -.38$, $g_{\text{non-IAT}} = -.14$), studies with a pre-test implicit task ($g_{\text{pre-test}} = -1.07$, $g_{\text{post-test only}} = -.23$), and studies that assessed a self-related association ($g_{\text{self}} = -.73$, $g_{\text{non-self}} = -.27$), though the 95% CI for this last difference overlapped slightly with 0. Future research could explore why such differences exist.

There are lengthy references and explanations of implicit racial bias, which Peterson denies is part of a legitimate program of study. Peterson's diagrams neglect attention to structures like race that are politically constituted entities that challenge his theory of agency.

(3) The implicit task assesses a pre-existing association. We defined a "pre-existing association" as an association that either should theoretically be present or has been empirically shown to be present via a demonstration of response bias on an implicit task within the target population. For example, most non-Black people have a response bias indicating they more easily pair Black people with bad and White people with good than the reverse (Nosek, Smyth et al., 2007), suggesting the presence of a pre-existing Black-bad White-good association.² Based on the nature of the pre-existing association, we defined pairings that strengthen (e.g., Black-bad and White-good) and weaken (e.g., Black-good and White-bad) the measured association. We excluded studies that formed a new association (e.g., about fictitious people or social groups; McConnell, Rydell, Strain, & Mackie, 2008) and studies of ambivalent or unelaborated associations (e.g., Petty et al., 2006) based on this criterion.

It's important to note that Peterson is using this study as part of his campaign to defund departments that challenge his research, and arguing this shows racial education programs don't work. But the study itself is extremely limited in also excluded studies that experimentally manipulated the stimuli or categories in an implicit task (e.g., by manipulating whether pictures of animals and plants in an animal/plant pleasant/unpleasant IAT are positively or negatively valenced; Govan & Williams, 2004) because the conditions assessed categorically different associations rather than changing a particular set of associations.

That method isn't the basis for his findings. It's not an accurate answer. 12 Rules and Maps are not books that demonstrate construct validity. What's the MTMM on the matriarchy and patriarchy? You can't cover non-falsifiability with stats words and hope your audience doesn't see.

It's honestly the most random moments, the ones that seem the most measured and most calm, that have been the most painful to watch. I can't imagine being that calm. I try to imagine being that calm and I cry instead. I can't even be that calm just watching.

That Brookings report is based on this figure w/ suspiciously manipulated y-axes. The Maryland economist paper they lean on (evans/owens) doesn't appear to be peer reviewed and is a fantastic example of how OLS regression on time-dependent variables needs special care. Needs an ARIMA model on the dependent variable because the data are likely not stationary and have autoregressive processes that artificially inflate the amount of variance explained in simple models like these (anything that is $> .90$ is in this context is more likely a specification problem w/ the model than an actual result). Also relies on data thats almost two decades old now.

Huh? I get you don't have to vote to be involved in politics, but you don't have to be involved in politics to vote sounds as if we've now attached a negative connotation to politics like we did with rhetoric years ago. Wasn't good for rhetoric, won't be good for politics. 🤔🤔

Genetics, as much as it pains me to admit, is a lousy way to establish gender. Because it's such an early stage (ie, genes aren't flesh), so much can change between genotype and phenotype. It's among the least likely ways to accurately predict gender.

Date

lipose-derived stem cells (ADSCs) have led to growing interest in cell-based therapy because they can be easily harvested from an abundant tissue. ADSCs must be expanded in vitro before transplantation. This essential step causes concerns about the safety of adult stem cells in terms of potential tumorigenesis. Tumorigenesis is driven in its earliest step by DNA replication stress, which is characterized by the accumulation of stalled DNA replication forks and activation of the DNA damage response. Thus, to evaluate the safety of ADSCs during ex vivo expansion, we monitored DNA replication stress and oxidative DNA lesions in ADSCs cultured under 21% oxygen concentration. Here, by combining immunofluorescence and DNA combing, we show that ADSCs cultured under 21% oxygen accumulate endogenous oxidative DNA lesions, which interfere with DNA replication by increasing fork stalling and thereby leading to incomplete DNA replication and fork collapse. Moreover, we found by RNA sequencing (RNA-seq) that culture of ADSCs under atmospheric oxygen concentration leads to misexpression of cell cycle and DNA replication genes, which could contribute to DNA replication stress. Finally, analysis of acquired small nucleotide polymorphism shows that expansion of ADSCs uncovers a high frequency of nucleotide polymorphism, insertion and deletion, which can be found in our genome browser.

Definitely. This also is the only explanation for the five (I'm sure the number will grow) Democrats who have assured me the Vietnam war was necessary. Mourning and grief have always been racially stratified to this beast of a nation....

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 26 Aug 2018

We're all learning a lot today, about whose grief matters, who we are allowed to grieve over, and whose deaths must never be mourned. As though every time someone who voted for war after war dies, we do not remember the lives lost, with little to no sympathy from the West.

10

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 26 Aug 2018

It's odd how an expression of grief for millions of lives lost is somehow less important, less pure, less worthy, than holding space for those grieving over one of many killers. Not just Iraq, even.

You really, really, should learn even a small something about the person you're talking about before you open your mouth and make a spectacular fool of yourself. In the words of our dearly departed Bourdain:

Once you've been to Cambodia, you'll never stop wanting to beat Henry Kissinger to death with your bare hands. You will never again be able to open a newspaper and read about that treacherous, prevaricating, murderous scumbag sitting down for a nice chat with Charlie Rose or attending some black-tie affair for a new glossy magazine without choking. Witness what Henry did in Cambodia – the fruits of his genius for statesmanship – and you will never understand why he's not sitting in the dock at The Hague next to Milošević. While Henry continues to nibble nori rolls and remaki at A-list parties, Cambodia, the neutral nation he secretly and illegally bombed, invaded, undermined, and then threw to the dogs, is still trying to raise itself up on its one remaining leg.

Top Latest People Photos Videos News Broadcasts

Late this week, our chapter President was contacted by a field director for Turning Point USA in regards to the death of Mollie Tibbetts. The voicemail left insisted that Charlie Kirk and Candace Owens visit the University of Iowa to host an immigration event in light of the recent tragedy our campus has faced.

We respectfully decline this invitation. We find it in poor taste to exploit the death of a Hawkeye to suit a political agenda. Should this event go on, it does so without the support of this executive board. Members of this chapter would like time to grieve and mourn the death of their classmate. We are all shocked, hurting, and in need of more respect than what was given to us by Turning Point USA.

This board also extends sympathy to the member of Mollie's family that dealt with public harassment from Turning Point USA Communications Director, Candace Owens. We ask that your exchange with Owens represent only herself and not conservatives as a whole. UI TPUSA stands with you and grieves alongside you.

When members of this board took on their roles, they were told that Turning Point USA would focus solely on fiscal issues. Our chapter does not take responsibility for statements made by Turning Point USA regarding immigration or other social issues. With that being said, executive board members have stepped down from their positions and association with Turning Point USA.

Sincerely,

Former University of Iowa Turning Point USA Executive Board Members

Intersectionality, like many groundbreaking theories, was a refutation of understandings of politicized identity that came before it. You seem to have no sense of the intellectual history you want to speak on. Try reading more things written by people with different experiences.

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 9 Aug 2018

Replying to @DanielDuerst

1. That is, again, what intersectionality rejects, not what it is.
2. To the extent agency is part of this conversation, newsflash: structures (ex: economic ones) position us in society in ways that actually rip away agency. Intersectionality is descriptive of that process.

Replying to @DanielDuerst

No, intersectionality is about how discursively-constituted identities aren't just the summation of their parts (ie being "low income, str8 wypipo" isn't about those individual identities, per se). It's complex, identities blend into new things. Your problem with this is what?

But, the rhetoric in the PNW suggests that engagement is rapidly becoming untenable, because the paired binaries of good/evil::patriot/antifa stand in for any meaningful democratic deliberation. They have claimed the time for debate is over; result is things like this (7/2018):

JONES: What is the profile of the average antifa? I kinda see the young meth head type, but then I kinda see the professor type in the background directing them

NORDEAN: Yeah. Well, I always say it seems like they all kind of came from the same inbred family, you know. They just come out of these holes, you don't really know where they come from. I'm sure they congregate from somewhere. But uh, yeah, they're all these Sméagol looking people—or they're women—so you know, they have the women on the front line, and then they have these sketchy looking cockroaches, you know, kind of wandering in the back with weapons. And there's nobody really prominent in their stature there and it's very odd, to say the least.

JONES: If you had to define them, it's weakness and dishonor and what you don't want to be. It's like "Wow, they don't even know that they are the literal stench of cowardice"

NORDEAN: Yeah. Yeah. They're what I would embody is just this demonically possessed meat suits of human beings. They aren't anything prominent, they don't have anything to show as a public figure.

JONES: They're the enemy.

NORDEAN: They're the enemy.

Oedipal nursery of primal emotions, but from the First World War. That war was a devastating experience not only for the men who lost, like these, but for those who "won." It was the first modern technological war, the first war to produce its own specific psychosis—"shell shock." Obviously very few of the survivors—and only an elite minority of the Germans—went on to create fascist movements. But in considering the so-far unending history made by men of the warrior caste, it may be helpful to recall that it is not only that men make wars, but that wars make men. For the warrior caste, war is not only death production, but a means of reproduction; each war deforms the human spirit and guarantees that the survivors—or some among them—will remain warriors. I do not offer this as an "excuse" (there are none) but as a thought that may have practical value: If we cannot, certainly not in one generation, uproot the murderous fantasies, we can at least Maybe, but you can't deny that there was a very large population of Africans in Egypt, so there's no reason to doubt their claims other than not wanting to see the African influence in what made Egypt so amazing. I think it only makes Egypt cooler.

I don't know, I don't think it's a problem. When you get where someone is coming from (being repeatedly denied access to their heritage) then it's easy to not get in your feelings about it. Old imperialism still shapes geopolitics today, and we need to reckon with that for real.

Modern Egyptians are certainly at least partially the product of colonialism and invasion. As with Sicilians like myself-- the whole of North Africa. No shame in knowing about where we came from. We can still be proud of how we rep our heritage today in a more inclusive way.

It's impossible to determine in via DNA. I don't know why I wouldn't take someone at the word. It's a sad way to live thinking you have to hold everyone to some kind of scientific standard of who they say they are. Let people live.

"Admixture" is a very deceptive term. It requires you to establish the boundaries of "pure" groups first, to be able to say that those groups then mix. There aren't racial groupings in the first place. At least not in terms of DNA. Politically, we've created them.

Whether or not they were human isn't really a relevant question, and who they are more/less similar to has no bearing on whether or not there were also African Egyptians. Keep in mind you are looking at a very small sample size of DNA compared to the ancient Egyptian population.

Edward Jenner did not patent his technology. He freely shared it because he understood how important it was to the world (remember, these were the days of smallpox and black plague). He didn't make changes to it, and he also didn't ask for credit. That's just the modern narrative

1) The middle east and africa are both underrepresented in DNA sampling, and
2) Sub-saharan Africa contains 95% of ALL human variation, so DNA banks that sample 2 or 3 populations and pretend those represent the region are oversimplifying in a very misleading way

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 31 Jul 2018Replying to @EgyptIsForever @LibAngry and 43 others

Using DNA like that is flawed for a simple reason-- it compares an archeological exhumation against a database created from people who are alive today. DNA databases don't show where you came from, they show where people like you live today, and are highly skewed bc: 1/2

Ming the Merciless did nothing wrong @notcolloquial · 31 Jul 2018Replying to @HahaBobby69 @LanceKay1 and 43 others

No, not Jenner himself. What he did was inoculation, not vaccination. Vaccines happened way later, thanks to the contributions of scientists from many races and nations.

Fun fact: Edward Jenner, considered the "inventor of vaccines," learned about inoculation from his slaves. The practice had been common in Africa for hundreds of years. Additionally, most modern antibiotics, including penicillin, are derived from the medicinal plants mentioned.

So noted. I'll offer some rules of engagement: If you don't want to hear what I have to say, then just say so and we'll avoid wasting each other's time. Make an argument (with or without an ad hom-- I don't mind a good jab), and I'll answer it. I'll expect the same. Deal?

They mean they selectively promote women to coerce them into sex. Now I get it.

Adjusting to new shit is hard. It's inconvenient. You great grandfather who fought in WWII or whatever who told you being a man is work? This is what he meant. He meant it is hard as hell to get up every day and choose to keep loving a world that is grinding you into the ground.

Stop worrying so much about being called a racist. We're all racist. Use people pointing it out as an opportunity to learn something you didn't know (ex: the history of a phrase or image) and be better for your city.

It's easy! Just say: "Heck, my b! Didn't realize. Which part?"
